DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

This Office Action is in response to applicant's amendment filed on February 26, 2007. Claim 10 has been cancelled. Claims 1 and 11-13 have been amended. Applicant's comments pertaining to the references to Yahr and to Velaquez applied in the previous Office Action are acknowledged. The claims, as amended, have been carefully considered however are rejected in the following manner.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-9 and 11-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yahr (U.S. Patent No. 4,820,290), and further in view of Velaquez (U.S. Patent No. 6,699,226). Yahr discloses in Figures 1-8 an abbreviated condom fitting over the penis head comprising elements as recited in these claims including a hood (12) or main body of condom and a band (14). Figure 6 illustrating the hood (32) including a projecting nipple (36) which forms an end receptacle for reservoir for collection and retention of ejaculated semen and with which is unitary to the body (12). The Yahr embodiments are preferred to be a latex or a rubber material. Figure 7 illustrating the band (34) serves as a securing means for attaching the condom device to the user's penis head but does not teach the band (34) is with adhesive. Velaquez discloses a container device for collecting semen, the container has an opening that fits over the penis gland, and the device has a securing means in the form of an adhesive that detachably adheres the device to the penis, thereby, preventing the device from detaching during operation. In particular, Figure 3a-3c illustrates the container device with adhesive strip having tab. With regards to claim 11, the Velaquez container in certain embodiments, the adhesive may be replaced or supplemented by a band of elastic material and/or making the container of an elastic material (column 5 lines 44-47). With regards to claims 12-16, Figure 3a shows the adhesive attached to container device via a cushion and the adhesive is covered by a protective strip and Figure 3b illustrates the protective strip is removed when the container device is ready to be applied on the user's penis head. With regards to claim 16, the container body is wide. Therefore, one of ordinary skill in the art during the time of the invention would have been motivated to modify the Yahr's secure means to include Velaquez's secure means in the form of adhesive strip as such would provide better attachment of the device to the user's penis head.
